

What is INDIGENOUS RESURGENCE?

Join the Northern Michigan University Center for Native American Studies for a discussion with

Dr. Taiiake Alfred

Wednesday, January 29 at 6 p.m.

Mead Auditorium-West Science Bldg.

NMU Campus in Marquette, Michigan

via video conference from University of Victoria-British Columbia

- ◇ Explore the concept of Indigenous Resurgence
- ◇ Examine the identities that have been created by Settler society to constrain the authentic existence of Indigenous peoples
- ◇ Learn how colonization has been and remains the main objective of Settler society
- ◇ Advocate for a confrontation, on all levels, with the falsehoods that define Indigenous people and communities
- ◇ Act to heal the confusion and destruction of Indigenous people individually and collectively.

This event is free and open to the public.

“...we are living through a spiritual crisis, a time of darkness that descended on our people when we became disconnected from our lands and from our traditional ways of life. We are divided amongst ourselves and confused in our own minds about who we are and what kind of life we should be living.”

- Taiiake Alfred, Ph.D.

Wasáse: Indigenous Pathways Of Action and Freedom

For more information, visit www.nmu.edu/nativeamericans or call 906-227-1397.
This presentation is made possible by the NMU Center for Native American Studies.

Gerald Taiiake Alfred
© Photo: RNW
<http://www.rnw.nl/english>

Professor Taiiake Alfred was raised on the Kahnawá:ke Mohawk Territory. He earned his Ph.D. in comparative politics and political theory from Cornell University.

He is the founding Director of the Indigenous Governance Program at the University of Victoria-British Columbia.

